35th Annual ART & SCIENCE of Health Promotion Conference

Please make plans to join me for the 35th Annual Art & Science of Health Promotion Conference in Scottsdale, Arizona. As the 2025 conference chair, I've worked closely with the planning team to curate sessions, speakers, and activities that will provide updates on the latest science in health promotion along with fresh perspectives, practical knowledge, and meaningful networking opportunities.

This year's theme is "Cultivating Connection: Belonging and the Bottom Line."

A portion of the conference program will be dedicated to addressing isolation and loneliness and increasing meaningful social connections. Other topics include the latest thinking about mental health, program evaluation, fostering a culture of health and well-being, mindfulness, and the use of artificial intelligence in health promotion. Our esteemed faculty will explore innovative approaches for optimizing well-being across a variety of settings and populations, including individuals, patients, employees, tribal and indigenous communities, and others.

Whether you're looking to deepen your expertise, reconnect with colleagues, or explore new trends, the 2025 conference has something for you.

I look forward to seeing you there!

Jessica Grossmeier, Ph.D., M.P.H.

Conference Chair, Art & Science of Health Promotion Conference
CEO, Jessica Grossmeier Consulting

"The content was great. I also enjoyed how friendly the other participants were and I was easily able to make friends with those I just met."

Conference Theme

Cultivating Connection: Belonging and the Bottom Line

Disconnection increases the risk for mental health challenges, and loneliness—in terms of its impact on mortality—is on par with smoking up to 15 cigarettes a day. This, and other alarming outcomes, were part of the 2023 U.S. Surgeon General's advisory on the health effects of social connection, which provides recommendations for individuals, health systems, workplaces, governments, and community organizations to address connection and promote well-being. In these settings, stewards of health promotion and population well-being are well-positioned to respond to this growing challenge. The advisory summarizes the many physical and mental health benefits of strengthening our relationships and increasing connection. It also highlights how disconnection increases the risk for mental health challenges, which is a growing concern across all sectors.

A few months after the U.S. Surgeon General's advisory was published, the World Health Organization launched the WHO Commission on Social Connection—a three-year initiative to reduce loneliness by raising awareness and increasing resources globally. The Commission echoes the advisory by articulating the significant impact of social connection on well-being while also acknowledging its impact on business. Disconnection and lack of support at work contribute to job dissatisfaction, burnout, and lower levels of individual and team performance, making the workplace an essential partner in addressing the increasing rates of loneliness and isolation.

Ignite Connection: Building Stronger Communities With Campfire Experiences

Charles Vogl, M.Div., Author, Speaker, and Adviser, The Vogl Group

Join Charles Vogl, adviser, speaker, and author of three books, as he delves into the essence of community and tackles the pressing issue of loneliness in the U.S. Through engaging discussions and practical insights from his books, Vogl will reveal the transformative power of campfire experiences. Learn how to identify and create meaningful campfire experiences that foster deep, authentic connections among individuals, for in-person and virtual environments. Perfect for health promotion leaders and anyone passionate about enhancing relationships and combating loneliness in their profession, organization, city, or family.

Thursday, April 3

The Future of Us: Generational Perspectives on Hope, Purpose, and Belonging

Victor Strecher, Ph.D., M.P.H., Professor, University of Michigan, School of Public Health, Founder and CEO, Kumanu, Inc.

In today's rapidly evolving world, fostering hope, purpose, and belonging is essential for enhancing well-being in both community and workplace settings. This keynote examines these three fundamental drivers impacting individual and collective well-being, with a focus on actionable insights for health promotion professionals. Leveraging multigenerational data—with a particular emphasis on Gen Z—we'll explore how to cultivate these drivers and discuss science-backed strategies to address their unique needs. Attendees will gain a deeper understanding of the role that hope, purpose, and belonging play in promoting mental and physical health and leave equipped with practical tools to strengthen these pillars within diverse communities and workforces.

Friday, April 4

Belongingness: Accelerating High-Trust, Resilient, and Rewarding Relationships

Shasta Nelson, M.Div., Speaker and Author

Did you know that employees who have meaningful relationships at work are seven times more likely to be engaged in their jobs, take fewer sick days, collaborate more effectively, provide better customer service, and have higher loyalty to their companies? Belongingness is the #1 factor for employee satisfaction, and creating a culture of belonging is an effective solution for decreasing turnover and increasing employee fulfillment.

In this dynamic and interactive program, social relationships expert and author of The Business of Friendship: Making the Most of Our Relationships Where We Spend Most of Our Time Shasta Nelson provides a framework to evaluate belongingness within your teams and delivers practical tools to create and accelerate the high-trust and resilient relationships that boost employee productivity, retention, and profitability.
